Care your child can agree to

California law lets students get some care without a parent's consent. From age 12, they can agree to mental health counseling, care for a drug or alcohol problem, and tests and treatment for sexually transmitted infections. At any age, they can agree to care to prevent or treat pregnancy.

Your child decides about that care. You can't see the records of it unless your child agrees, and you don't pay for most of it. For mental health or drug and alcohol care, our counselors involve parents unless they decide that would not be right for your child. We encourage students to talk with their parents.

This consent lasts for this school year. You can change or withdraw it at any time. Tell us in writing.
